THE COMMUNITY

Cripple Creek occupies 1.53 square miles on the western slope of Pikes Peak in Colorado’s majestic Rocky Mountains and is located 44 miles southwest of Colorado Springs. Cripple Creek played an integral role in the rich heritage of Colorado. The first homesteaders arrived here in the mid-1800s. In 1890, a ranch hand named Bob Womack discovered gold and Cripple Creek changed forever. When the gold era ended in 1918, more than $300 million in gold had been mined in what would be the last great gold rush in North America. By the 1920s, only about 40 mines remained, but two decades later, in the 1940s, the City began to promote itself as a tourist destination, offering visitors a glimpse into the past. In 1991, the City was opened to limited-stakes gaming. Today, the venerable gold camp has reinvented itself as a full-service tourist destination, all the while preserving and showcasing its rich history. While the City’s permanent population is 1,250 the large number of casino employees and patrons make it comparable to a community of 10,000. Cripple Creek is a designated National Historic Landmark and greets 1.2 million visitors each year. In 2017 it was voted one of Trip Advisor’s “20 Best Summer Vacation Ideas”.
